d. Page 4 - Possible question: What is a National Security Action Memorandum? How does it differ from a National Security Council Intelligence Directive, and could you give us an example or two of NSAMs which are particularly important to CIA?

e. Page 6 - Possible question: I understand the SIG and IRGs were established in the spring of 1966. How often do these groups meet? Could you give us a specific example or two which would illustrate the manner in which intelligence problems are handled by these groups and the specific assistance or lack thereof rendered to the CIA?

f. Page 9 - Possible question: Could you elaborate on how you would exclude intelligence and covert action activities from the consolidated programs and at the same time ensure that the necessary and appropriate policy-making officials give these activities due consideration in the over-all scheme of things?

g. Page 12 - I subscribe in general to John Clarke's comments, which I have already furnished you, about the lack of adequate information on the DCI's role as the community intelligence coordinator. I would think there might be a good many questions in this area.
